

The girl showed that she believed Gillette would return to her and make her his wife.

Grace Brown and Chester Gillette were employed in the skirt factory of N. H. Gillette, an uncle of the young man in Cortland. The two fell in love with each other and for almost two years they went together. Although Gillette's parents were poor, his uncle's wealth admitted him to the best social circles in Cortland.

Gillette concluded he wanted to wed a woman of wealth and social position, but he had promised to marry Grace Brown. He took her to Big Moose Lake, in the Adirondacks, where the couple went rowing. They did not return to the hotel, and in the afternoon the boat in which they had gone out was found floating bottom upward in the lake. The body of Grace Brown was found and the marks on the body indicated that she had been struck several blows with a heavy weapon and then thrown into the lake.

Gillette wandered about the woods for a day, sought to hide his identity, and when he was arrested told conflicting stories. At his trial a testimony that the girl had upset the row-boat, and that he made no effort to save her, having all he could do to save himself.

that their expenses had been paid out of the Federal Treasury.

He knew, he said, it was not safe to attack the Forestry Bureau, because of the influence it had over the country.

Mr. Scott protested that Mr. Monell was mistaken in saying government money had been improperly used, but in reply Mr. Monell suggested that there had been false entries in the forestry office books in order to cover up the expenditures.

The amendment was adopted. Mr. Monell offered an amendment prohibiting the use of any part of the appropriation to pay for any newspaper or magazine article advertising the bureau work.

Pinchot for Press.

Mr. Scott read a letter from Mr. Pinchot justifying the news items on the ground that it was necessary to convert scientific knowledge into common knowledge, and that the periodical press was the best means of distributing the information.

Mr. Monell insisted that he was not opposing the distribution of the information when given out in a proper way.

The amendment was adopted. Mr. Williams, Mississippi, the minority leader, opposed a motion by Mr. Scott to lay the bill aside, and forced a vote by tellers. The motion carried, 57 to 45.

Mr. Williams filibustered again on a motion to adjourn. By a vote of 56 to 45, a strict party vote, the House agreed to adjourn, but the Democrats, under Mr. Williams's leadership, forced a roll call on the question, thereby making good his threat of last week to require such a roll call on every affirmative vote until certain legislation is enacted.

Speaker Cannon clearly displayed anger when the Democrats rose in sufficient numbers to order the call.

The vote resulted—ayes 103, nays 88—and the House accordingly adjourned.

FAULKNER IS DEAD

Negro's Own Delirious Struggles Brought About End.

With the fear of the gallows or the electric chair constantly in his mind, Robert Faulkner, the young negro, who some time ago ran amuck on Nineteenth and Franklin streets and shot eight persons, died early yesterday morning at the colored city hospital as the result of his own delirious struggles.

In every way possible the man had interfered with Drs. Hinckman and Young, and several times had thrown himself bodily from his bed. Frequently his mother visited him and she often told Faulkner that she would rather see him dead than in his present predicament. This preyed on his already overwrought imagination, and at length that he was always restless. Early Sunday morning he flung himself from the bed, and it is believed by the physicians that part of the crust over the healing bullet wound in his leg got into a blood vessel. This clogged an artery, and when he arose to take a drink of water, the stoppage took effect, and he fell back dead.

Policemen had been guarding Faulkner's bed ever since the night he ran wild and were called to the hospital at his violent recovery, and it is improbable that he would have been sent to the gallows had he lived.

NEW HOSPITAL

Dr. William H. Parker Buys Old Van Lew Mansion.

Dr. William H. Parker, of Twenty-third and Broad streets, has purchased the property of the Virginia Club, the old Van Lew mansion, and will convert it into a general hospital, in which patients suffering from pulmonary as well as other diseases will be treated. The house is one of the most historic in the city.

The club has made arrangements for other quarters, and will vacate some time next winter.

GIFT TO LIBRARY

Historic Virginia Views Presented by Colonel James Mann.

One of the handsomest gifts made to the State Library in some time came from the Tameson Official Photograph Company, which has presented about 125 views of historic places in Virginia. The collection includes many of the old Virginia mansions and churches, with monuments and historic spots of the State.

The pictures were presented by Colonel James Mann, president of the company. The work is by Harry Mann, well known as the journal clerk of the State Senate.

Librarian H. R. McIlwaine has ordered special brackets, frames, in which the collection can be mounted under glass on hinged frames and along the walls of the picture gallery. It is the intention of the librarian from time to time to secure views of historic spots in other sections of the State.

DEATH ACCIDENTAL

Coroner's Jury Attributes No Blame to Driver for Running Over Mrs. Keith.

After numerous witnesses had been examined and every detail of the distressing accident had been investigated, the coroner's jury called yesterday afternoon to inquire into the death of Mrs. Mollie Keith, of No. 21 East Marshall street, came to the decision that it was due to collision with a car carrying of Mrs. M. Rosenbloom on Thursday evening. The verdict did not settle the blame.

All the evidence was directly in favor of Cary Braxton, the driver, but he must appear in the Police Court to answer to the charge of killing Mrs. Keith. The aged lady, it developed during the examination, was in the habit of brooding over a daughter who died about five years ago, and went with her head constantly bent toward the ground.

FORESTRY CHIEF UNDER FIRE

Mr. Toney Finally Decides Not to Enter Race as Candidate for Mayor.

Manchester Bureau, Times-Dispatch.

No. 1102 Hull Street.

Instead of relieving the situation, the announcement yesterday by Mr. D. L. Toney that he would not become a candidate for Mayor, adds a stimulus to the race, which is already close and exciting.

Mayor Maurice and Mr. L. R. Brown, candidates for Mayor, are confident of victory, and their friends are backing them up in their assertions. Several small wagers have been made on the contest, neither side taking or giving odds.

Mr. Toney, although regretting to leave the race, said that owing to his business interests, and the time which he would have to give to the position should he be elected, finally decided that it would be impossible for him to run. He gave out the following statement:

To the Voters of Manchester:

It having been rumored that I might be a candidate for the position of Mayor of the city in the coming primary, I desire to state in connection therewith that such will not be the case, as my business is such that it requires nearly all of my time and attention, and I think that this city has grown to such proportion that the duties of this important position require nearly all the time and judgment of any practical man in the interest of the city are properly and judiciously attended to. I thank my friends for their assurance of support and expressions of fidelity.

Very respectfully,

D. L. TONEY.

The First Ward delegation of the Street Committee met last night and considered work to be done in the ward. The committee will make a report to the full committee next Thursday night.

Revival services are being conducted at Bainbridge Street Baptist Church this week, and have begun under the most auspicious circumstances. Rev. J. W. Durham, the pastor, is conducting the services. ## CHRONIC STOMACH TROUBLE

A great many people who are suffering from indigestion are suffering unnecessarily. They can be cured.

Proper attention to the diet and the right remedy to tone up the weakened organs are all that is required.

The symptoms of stomach trouble are: loss of appetite, a ravenous appetite, some loathe the sight of food. Often there is a feeling of weight on the chest, a full feeling in the throat.

Some times the gas passes on the heart and leads the sufferer to think he has heart disease. Stomachache is a frequent and distressing symptom.

Miss Julia A. Van Sickle, of 724 No. Ninth street, Fort Dodge, Iowa, says: "Last winter I suffered from loss of appetite, general weakness and indigestion. I had no desire for food of any kind. I had a nervous headache nearly every afternoon, especially when I began to get tired. My heart also troubled me—skipping a beat every once in a while."

"My father urged me to take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills as he thinks very highly of them. In a few days I saw they were helping me. My appetite returned and I have not been bothered by stomach trouble or nervousness since."

Sufferers from dyspepsia in any form who find their condition unrelieved, or actually growing worse, by using other remedies, would do well to try
